Manual or Automated?

The equipment that is right for you depends almost entirely on the anticipated production volume. If you will only be producing 50 discs a week or less, the entry models like the Bravo SE or Microboards G3 will fit your needs. If your volume is higher, then the Bravo 4100 series or Epson discproducer will provide a totally unattended operation. For very high volumes, it is more efficient to split the disc printing from duplicating. In these cases an autoprinter together with a standalone tower will provide the highest throughput. Another factor affecting throughput is the artwork for the disc imprint. Full colour images will naturally take longer to print than only text. For the best possible appearance use Watershield media which ensures that the final output has a gloss smudge-proof finish.

JVC Professional DVD Media

Unlike normal inkjet discs, WaterShield media is water resistant, scratch resistant, and features a high gloss finish. WaterShield blank media is the best way to ensure your discs stay protected from harsh everyday elements while providing that 'wow!' factor. Manufactured by JVC Professional, Watershield media is ideal for the projects that have to look perfect!
